ANTI-DISCRIMINATION STATEMENT

Last updated March 31st, 2026

The Segal Centre believes in the power of the performing arts to strengthen and connect communities. We are committed to fostering an environment that actively works against discrimination in all its forms, including racism, antisemitism, anti-Blackness, unconscious bias, and prejudice based on race, religion, ethnicity, or identity.

Situated in the heart of Montreal's Jewish community, the Segal Centre has long explored facets of Jewish identity through the arts while serving as a bridge between cultures. For more than 60 years, our stage has celebrated Jewish stories while also amplifying diverse voices and experiences from across many backgrounds.

In recent years, we have undertaken reflection and action across all levels of our organization to ensure that our practices reflect these values. This work includes ongoing dialogue with our stakeholders and Board of Directors, the engagement of cultural consultants, and the active participation across all of our departments in our Equity, Diversity and Inclusion Committee (ENSEMBLE).

At a time when antisemitism and other forms of discrimination are on the rise, we remain committed to using our platform to encourage dialogue, understanding, and empathy. The Segal Centre strives to be a welcoming and safer space for all – one where artists, audiences, and staff from historically marginalized communities feel at home and where diverse perspectives can be shared openly and respectfully.
